KIM KOMANDO Q&A

How your iPhone could save your life

It's hard to imagine leaving the house without a cellphone. Most of us feel naked and alone without our phones, disconnected from the world. We feel, in a word, unsafe.

The truth is, your mobile phone can save your life. Driving in remote places, cornered by an attacker, pinned beneath machinery, we can use our phones to reach emergency workers in ways that no other distress signal can.

A smartphone can pinpoint exactly where we are located. We can use photos, video calls, and digital "pins" to illustrate the situation.

That's why it's vital for you to share the very important information contained in this article with your family members and friends.

Knowing how to use your phone's safety features is as essential as having a smoke detector in your home. These tools are powerful in an emergency, but they're useless if you don't know how they work.

For iOS gadgets, Apple has provided built-in emergency SOS and medical data tools that you can utilize to assist you when the unthinkable happens. Here are iPhone settings that may just save your life.

• How Emergency SOS works:

Emergency SOS is a feature that will call emergency services and notify your personal emergency contacts when you need it.

In the U.S., your iPhone will dial 911 and connect you to an operator. After that call concludes, it will then send a text message to your emergency contacts (unless you choose to cancel). It will send your current location to your contacts and also update them when your location changes.

Even if you keep your iPhone's location services turned off, the phone will automatically turn it back on during Emergency SOS.

• How to activate Emergency SOS:

Previous versions of the iPhone (7 and earlier) let you start SOS mode by pressing the side button five times and dragging the bright red slider over to start the call to 911.

While this action still works, there are additional emergency options for the iPhone 8, 8 Plus, and X.

For Apple's latest phones, press and hold the side button along with one of the volume buttons until you see the Emergency SOS slider appear on the screen.

Now, you have two options. You can manually move the slider to start the call, or you can continue to hold down the buttons. If you choose this second route, the iPhone will start a countdown and then automatically call emergency services.

This is handy if you're in a situation where you can't afford to look down at your phone or if you need to dial 911 discreetly.

If your situation is resolved, you can open the status bar and choose "Stop sharing emergency location" to end the updates to your contacts. Otherwise, it will keep running for 24 hours.

You can also halt an emergency call if you accidentally pressed the buttons down. Just hit the Stop button and then choose "Stop Calling."

• How to turn off Auto Call:

If you're worried about accidentally setting off Emergency SOS, you can always disable the Auto Call feature that starts a countdown timer and then automatically dials 911 when you hold the side and volume buttons down. To do this, open Settings, select Emergency SOS and then toggle the Auto Call slider to off. Even if it's set to off, you can still use the SOS feature by dragging the SOS slider on the screen.

• Medical ID:

Be sure to also use its Medical ID. This is where you store information that your doctor needs to know, especially in emergencies. If you have any health ailments or you're allergic to any medications that emergency responders need to know, you can store it on your Medical ID.

You can list the medications you're currently taking. You can input your medical history, weight, height, blood type and more.

Do you ever worry about who will notify your family if you're rushed to the hospital or you're in an accident? On Medical ID, you can put in the names of your emergency contacts, their phone numbers, and special instructions to call them right away.

Here's how to use Apple's Medical ID: Tap on Medical ID >> Edit. Then, and this is really important, turn on Show When Locked. That'll ensure first responders can see your medical information even when your iPhone screen is locked.

To make an emergency call or to see your Medical ID: Wake up your phone by swiping left to right >> tap Emergency >> make an emergency call or tap Medical ID to see the medical information you have stored.

• Add emergency contacts:

To add emergency contacts, open the Health app and go to the Medical ID settings. Choose to edit and scroll down for emergency contacts. Here you can add your contacts, whether it is a spouse, a family member, or a trusted friend. Select "Done" in the upper right-hand corner to save your changes.

Don't wait to set up your Emergency SOS contacts. Do it now, so it's ready to go when you need it. Hopefully, you won't ever find yourself in a situation where you have to use Emergency SOS, but it's good to know it's available if necessary.

Time is a Key Factor in Investing

With the arrival of the New Year, many of us will pause and ponder the age-old question: "Who knows where the time goes?" And, as is always the case, none of us really do know. However, wherever the time goes, it will usually be a key factor in your success as an investor.

Time can affect how you invest, and the results of your investing, in different ways:

• Growth potential – Contrary to myth, there's no real way to "get rich quick" when investing. To build wealth, you need patience – and time. If you own quality investments with growth potential, and you give them years – in fact, decades – to increase in value, your perseverance may be rewarded. Of course, there are no guarantees, and you'll need the discipline to withstand the inevitable downturns along the way. But in describing how long he likes to keep his investments, renowned investor Warren Buffet says his favorite holding period is "forever."

• Targeted goals – To accumulate resources for retirement, you need to save and invest throughout your working life. But along the way, you'll probably also have some shorter-term goals – making a down payment on a home, sending your children to college, taking a round-the-world trip, and so on. Each of these goals has a specific time limit and usually requires a specific amount of money, so you will need to choose the appropriate investments.

• Risk tolerance – The element of time also will affect your tolerance for risk. When you have many decades to go until you retire, you can afford to take more risk with your investments because you have time to overcome periods of market volatility. But when you're on the verge of retirement, you may want to lower the risk level in your portfolio. For example, you may want to begin moving away from some of your more aggressive, growth-oriented investments and move toward more income-producing vehicles that offer greater stability of principal. Keep in mind, though, that even during retirement, you'll need your portfolio to provide enough growth opportunity at least to help keep you ahead of inflation.

Thus far, we have looked at ways in which time plays a role in how you invest. But there's also an aspect of time that you may want to keep out of your investment strategies. Specifically, you might not want to try to "time" the market. The biggest problem with market timing is it's just too hard. You essentially have to be right twice, selling at a market top and buying at the bottom. Also, as humans, we appear to be somewhat wired to think that an activity – especially a long-running activity – will simply continue. So, when the market goes up, we seem to expect it to keep rising, and when the market drops, we think it will continue dropping. This can lead to big mistakes, such as selling after a major market drop even though that can be the time when it may be much smarter to buy because prices are low.

As we've seen, the way you interact with time can affect your investment efforts. So, think carefully about how you can put all the days, months and years on your side. Time is the one asset you can't replenish – so use it wisely.
