KIM KOMANDO Q&A

Innovative ways to make money online

“Online work” used to mean “money grabbing scam.” You might find a job selling things online for a commission or writing blogs for money, but these rarely provided a living wage, or even enough spare change to justify the time commitment.

Times have changed. The internet has finally become profitable not just for start-up entrepreneurs in Silicon Valley, but for regular people with everyday skills.

You don’t have to build your own website or incorporate a business (although these things certainly help.) You can enroll in a ready-made network and ply your trade among similar-minded craftspeople.

What are these services? How can you sign up? Here’s a list of side-gigs to get your hustle on.

Stock photography: You’re an ace with a camera. You capture eye-catching images, and you know how to set the scene. You can turn that skill into online income by listing your images on stock-photography sites like Shutterstock and Adobe Stock.

You receive a royalty when customers purchase the right to use your work. These sites are always looking for a variety of images, whether it’s lavish food photography or eye-catching scenes of natural beauty.

These services don’t want pretty snapshots. Sellable stock photos are professionally shot and edited, and they often require certain file formats. Review the companies’ requirements carefully before uploading.

• Swagbucks: You already watch plenty of videos online, so why not make a little extra money while you’re doing it? Swagbucks is a site that rewards its users with gift cards for taking surveys, watching certain videos, or conducting web searches with its search engine. You earn points by participating in Swagbucks activities and you can then redeem those points for gift cards or cash back from PayPal.

• SpeakWrite: Do you have blazing fast typing fingers? Online transcription company Speak-

Write hires independent contractors and lets them set their own hours and work from home. SpeakWrite says its typists on average earn around $300 per month, while the top earners pull in over $3,000. You must first pass a typing test that judges you for speed and accuracy and requires you to have some previous experience in transcription and word processing.

• Society6: Artists and designers upload their original work to Society6, which then prints the images onto a variety of products. Society6 offers an incredible range: T-shirts, pillows, wall hangings, duvet covers and iPhone cases, among countless others. Society6 handles all the fulfillment; artists can focus on their designs and receive a commission on anything sold. It’s a little like Etsy, but you don’t have to deal with physically creating or shipping your work.

• Mechanical Turk: Amazon describes its Mechanical Turk service as a “marketplace for work.” When you sign up as a worker, you can then choose which tasks to complete. Those tasks might involve translating text from one language into another, rating search results, determining if a website is suitable for an audience, correcting spelling, or pulling usable information from images. In general, the tasks don’t pay a lot, but they also don’t usually take much time.

• TaskRabbit: TaskRabbit lets people post simple jobs like furniture assembly, home cleaning, grocery shopping or moving help. You can sign up as a “Tasker” and make money completing those tasks. With its new options, tasks can be confirmed in five minutes and completed within 90 minutes. Not only is that good for users in a time crunch, but it also gives Taskers more opportunities to work throughout the day.

• Homepolish: Whether you’re a seasoned interior designer or just starting out, Homepolish gives you the freedom of being an independent contractor, but you get access to Homepolish’s network of clients, support, and advice.

• Zeel: Massage therapy is a rewarding field, but starting out is tough. You have to build a client list or find a job at a massage center. That’s where Zeel is looking to change things. The app lets clients connect with massage therapists for same-day massages in their homes.

As the massage therapist, you receive a notification when someone nearby wants an appointment. Zeel says that massage therapists get a 75-percent cut of each payment, plus it automatically handles fees for late cancellations. For safety, Zeel says it has an ID verification system on the client side, and massage therapists can rate clients, so problematic ones get weeded out. It’s currently available in over 50 cities.

• UserTesting: UserTesting hires contractors to try out websites and provide feedback through videos. Companies use this as a way to see how well their sites work and test new re-designs. Workers typically get paid $10 per test. Some testers report that opportunities can be sporadic and competitive. But as a recurring gig, UserTesting can be a real boon for people who are already online.

• Pack and ship packages: If you’re a packing whiz and like to drive, Shyp might be a good fit for you. When customers have something to ship, they can summon a Courier (you) through the Shyp app. The Courier shows up within 20 minutes, packs the item with the appropriate materials and takes it off to ship with the lowest priced carrier. Shyp is designed to take the hassle out of selling on eBay, sending gifts, and returning online purchases.

• Be a modern-day butler: Unless you’re a rich aristocrat, you probably never thought you could have a butler. Hello Alfred wants to bring butlers (or Alfred Client Managers, as they’re officially known) to the regular households. For $32 a week, clients can claim one butler-like visit for tidying up and grocery shopping. Clients can arrange more visits per week or pay extra on a per-item basis for picking up special food items, dry cleaning, shipping items and other errands. If you’re interested in being an “Alfred,” you can earn up to $25 an hour.

When Do You Need a Financial Advisor?

If you could accomplish all your financial goals just by putting your paycheck into the bank every couple of weeks, you wouldn’t need the services of a financial advisor. But life isn’t that simple – and so, at some point, you may realize you need some professional assistance. But when?

Actually, you might benefit from the services of a financial advisor during many life events, including the following:

• Starting your career – When you’re starting out in your career, you may encounter several questions related to your benefits package. Should you contribute to your 401(k) or other employer-sponsored plan? If so, how much, and where should you invest your money? Are the life and disability insurance policies offered by your employer sufficient for your needs? A financial advisor can help you answer these and other questions you may have.

• Getting married – When you get married, you’ll have to decide if, and how, you want to combine your finances. Also, you and your spouse may have different attitudes about investing and different tolerances for risk. A financial professional can help you find common ground.

• Changing jobs – When you switch jobs, what should you do with your old employer’s retirement plan? And how should you invest in the plan offered by your new employer? As was the case when you first began your career, you may find that a financial professional can help you make the right choices.

• Facing a layoff or buyout – You may never go through a layoff, or take a buyout offer from an employer – but if either of these events happen, you will face some financial decisions. And during such a potentially stressful period, you may be tempted to make some financial moves that won’t be beneficial. A financial advisor can suggest some strategies that may help you keep your investment situation relatively intact until you land your next job.

• Saving for college – If you have children whom you’d like to send to college someday, you’ll probably want to start putting money away as early as possible. A financial professional can show you the various college-savings vehicles, and help you choose the ones that are most appropriate for your needs.

• Getting divorced – If you are fortunate, you won’t ever experience a divorce, but, if it does happen, you’ll want to get the professional assistance necessary to ensure fair outcomes for everyone. You’ll obviously need to work with an attorney, but you may find that, in the area of investments, a financial advisor also can be useful.

• Entering retirement – As you near retirement, your key questions will switch – but not entirely – from putting money in to taking money out. How much can you withdraw each year from your 401(k) and IRA without running the risk of outliving your resources? When should you start taking Social Security? If you were to work a couple of years longer than you had originally intended, how would it affect your withdrawal strategies? Again, a financial advisor can help you with these issues.

As you can see, most important life events will carry some financial concerns. But you don’t have to face these challenges alone – and by getting the help you need, when you need it, you can ease the transition from one stage of life to another.

100th Anniversary Celebration... Wilfong Building

Built in 1917, J.M. Wilfong filled his dry goods store with the finest merchandise from Dallas and St. Louis. Mr. Wilfong sold his store and building to Jess P. and his wife, Dottie Mae McBride Smith, in 1934 to open a new store in Gainesville. Mr. and Mrs. Smith operated the business until his death in 1963, and Mrs. Smith continued the business until February 1972 upon her retirement.

The Wilfong Building is a historic building in downtown Sanger and has been an integral part of this town's history for 100 years. A celebration was held in the mezzanine of the building on December 14, 2017 with a crowd attending the event and learning about the history of the building. A commemorative souvenir of the event was provided to the guests, along with catering from Bolivar St BBQ, and a 100th Celebration cake.

The Chamber of Commerce, Sanger Area Historical Society, Bolivar St BBQ, and Aflac Insurance sponsored this event last month.

An estimated crowd of 80 people attended the come-and-go event and exchanged memories, ate wonderful food, and enjoyed hearing the history of the Wilfong Building which remains an iconic building in our community. If you missed the event, the historic information displayed on poster boards are available for viewing at the Chamber of Commerce, and you may receive one of the handouts from either the Chamber of Commerce, or at the Sanger Area Historical Society Museum located at 511 N. Fifth Street.

Future events will be held to honor the historic buildings in Sanger so keep watch!
