Sanger ISD surprises staff with employee retention stipend

Teachers and staff in Sanger ISD were greeted with an unexpected surprise on Tuesday morning — an employee retention stipend. As a thank-you for their tireless work since the onset of the COVID-19 pandemic, the Sanger ISD school board unanimously approved the stipends at January's board meeting on Jan. 11. The checks, which were funded using ESSER II allocations, ranged from $500-$1,000, depending on length of employment. Staff who had been with the district one year or less received $500. Employees who had been with Sanger ISD 2-5 years received $750, while staff employed six years or more received $1,000.

"This is a small token of appreciation for the hard work our staff has put forth during education's most challenging time," Sanger ISD Superintendent Dr. Tommy Hunter said. "COVID has been a battle both professionally and personally for us all, and we all have been impacted by COVID one way or another."

In all, Sanger ISD distributed nearly $375,000 in stipends to over 400 employees. Several members of the school board, including board President Ken Scribner, were on hand Tuesday morning to deliver checks to staff members at various campuses. "Teachers are our biggest asset," Scribner said. "In 12 years, I've fought hard for raises. Any time there is a chance to put any extra money in their pockets, whenever we have the funds, I'm 1,000% for it. "Thank you doesn't go far enough."

Sanger Police Chiefs Rhodes and Perkins attend North Texas Mayor's Crime Prevention Luncheon

CORINTH — Texas Gov. Greg Abbott vowed last week to secure the state's border with Mexico amid criticism by his political rivals that his plan to curb illegal crossings is flawed and inadequate.

Abbott's speech to Denton County elected and law enforcement officials was in his capacity as governor, but it crystalized several talking points for his reelection campaign. Along with border security, Abbott stressed the importance of adequately funding law enforcement agencies. Sanger's new police chief Waylan Rhodes and Assistant Chief Jonathan Perkins attended the North Texas Mayor's Crime Prevention Luncheon last week.

Issues related to border security and police funding appeal to the Republican voters he'll need to win in the March 1 primary, where he faces a challenge from a field of GOP conservatives, including former state Sen.

Donald Huffines of Dallas and former Texas Republican Party Chairman Allen West of Garland.

Not more than a rock toss from the Corinth event at CoServ Electric was a Huffines campaign billboard that read "secure the border."

Abbott says his focus has long been directed at border security. And on he told the Denton County audience that he's deployed 10,000 members of the Texas National Guard to help secure the border, including arresting criminals, stopping the flow of illegal drugs, and curbing human trafficking. He touted his border wall project and legislative funding for security in the region.

"We're setting all-time records on the number of people who are coming across the border. It was approaching, across the entire border region, close to 2 million people who came across the border this past year," Abbott said. "One reason why we're able to do these strategies is because the state Legislature appropriated $3 billion for the state to be able to address the border crisis. That's Texas taxpayer money doing the federal government's job."

But Abbott's efforts to secure the border have been met with criticism from his rivals, including Huffines, West and former U.S. Rep. Beto O'Rourke of El Paso, a Democratic Party candidate for governor.

Critics say the mission, known as Operation Lone Star, resulted in the hasty deployment of Texas National Guard troops without assuring they had the proper equipment, regular pay or a clear purpose.

The GOP-controlled Legislature has already poured about $412 million into the border mission. Yet the Texas Military Department has suggested it could cost far more: as much as $2 billion this fiscal year, according to an October estimate obtained by The Dallas Morning News.

During his Corinth speech, the governor blasted the movement in some cities — nationally and in Texas — to cut police department budgets. He singled out Austin, saying the city had reduced police funding by $100 million. But he said leaders of some cities across the country were having buyer's remorse about efforts to "defund" the police.

Last year, the Legislature approved legislation that would make it more difficult for local authorities to cut law enforcement budgets.

"When you try to diminish the role of law enforcement, it gives, in a way, support to those who are the criminal elements who want to defy laws, who want to commit crimes, knowing that law enforcement may not be there to control crime," Abbott said.

"That is exactly why this past session we promised our law enforcement officers they will do more than just show our gratitude. We would support them by ensuring that we will not allow cities like Austin to defund the police. Instead, Texas would defund any city that defunds our law enforcement officers," he added.

"We have teachers and staff that give their heart and soul to each and every student. They see them for who they are and the potential they possess. We are incredibly blessed as a district and as a school board, and giving back was easy to say yes to without hesitation."

Chiefs

Denton County Democrat Ira Bershad said Abbott should be talking about protecting voting rights and expanding Medicaid to improve access to affordable health care, rather than just rehashing his typical political rhetoric.

“Governor Abbott is going around the state continuing to spout the failed talking points of his idol, Donald Trump,” Bershad wrote in a text message. “It’s the same tired tactic meant to divide people. What he’s NOT talking about is how he’s failed to secure and fortify the state’s power grid.”

Assistant Sanger Police Chief Jonathan Perkins with the Honorable Governor Greg Abbott.
